Pam Bulahan I didn't click on the link assuming these were painted. Since these are beads I can see why Paul tagged me, I staff a store most weekends that sells beaded items such as moccasins, a horse saddle, vests, and even pants. With the exception of the saddle the other beaded stuff still costs less than Manolo Blahniks or Christian Louboutins as far as shoes.

"If ever there were a time for President Barack Obama to accelerate his "pivot" to Asia it's now. There's plenty to worry about as China tosses money at rogue governments like Sudan and Zimbabwe. But there's also lots at stake for Asia's budding democracies. The so-called Washington consensus on economic policies isn't perfect, but is Beijing's model of autocratic state capitalism with scant press freedom really a better option?"

"SACRAMENTO — New Year's Day will usher in hundreds of new laws in California, including a landmark law that allows undocumented individuals to receive a driver's license.

In all, California will add 930 new laws, most of which will go into effect Thursday. Some of the most talked-about laws won't take effect until July, such as a statewide ban on plastic bags, required sick leave for employees and a requirement that new smartphones come with antitheft technology."

Vlad Putin's strong man appeal with emphasis on the "male" aspect may draw on thousands of years of mass acculturation. The strong male ruler is seen as needed to maintain order, tradition and "moral society."

Many people simply do not understand concepts of liberty and freedom as observed by the enlightenment thinkers in the pristine societies of Native Americans and Pacific Islanders.

Democratic rule is often seen as indecisive if not entirely dysfunctional.

From the Letter of Prester John to Emperor Manuel (1165 CE):

" We feed daily at our table 30,000 men, besides casual guests; and all of these receive daily sums from our treasury, to nourish their horses and for other expenses. This table is made of precious emerald, with four columns of amethyst supporting it; the virtue of this stone is that no one sitting at the table can fall into drunkenness.

During each month we are served at our table by seven kings, each in his turn, ...

According to some anthropologists, certain priesthoods like the Brahmins of India and the Levites of Ancient Israel arose as castes of ritual cooks.

Healer, priest, confessor, chef

A soldier once went to Ayurveda practitioner Jacob Gnailan, a native of Kerala, India, to find a cure for his insomnia and lack of zest for life and ended up confessing a 40-year-old sin.

Jews once owned nearly all of the studios and they still have highly disproportionate numbers on the business side of Hollywood. However, the numbers on the creative side are not what they once were.

"Only 4 Jewish actors out of sixty (6.7%) total nominees across twelve different categories got nods. And no Jews were nominated for writing or directing in the many different categories."

The Jews of the Golden Globes

- The nominees for the 2015 Golden Globe Awards have been announced and, as expected, a number of Jews have been nominated. But, believe it or not, the vast majority of them were not Jews. No, Jews do not "own" Hollywood if the Golden Globe nominations this year are any indicator. Only 4 J

Fra Mauro's Mappamundi (1457 -1459)

"About the year of Our Lord 1420 a ship, what is called an Indian junk [Zoncho de India], on a crossing of the Sea of India towards the Isle of Men and Women, was driven by a storm beyond the Cape of Diab, through the Green Isles, out into the Sea of Darkness on their way west and southwest, in the direction of Algarve. Nothing but air and water was seen for forty days and by their reckoning they ran 2,000 miles and fortune deserted them. When the stress of the weather had subsided they made the return to the said Cape of Diab in seventy days..."

Rauni Salminen a lovely optimistic movie, with Jimmy Stewart in one of his best roles. still, I've seen it many times, would rather see something else- but old, classic movies anyway. singing in the rain would be suitable for our present climate. and always loved Gene Kelly's dancing, too.

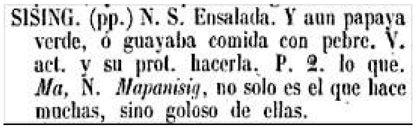
The original Kapampangan sisig (sising or sisid) according to Bergano's 18th century dictionary. Much different than the current popular dish that originated around the old Clark Air Force Base.

Sising - Salad. And even green papaya or guava served with black pepper.



SISING. (pp.) N. S. Ensalada. Y aun papaya verde, ó guayaba comida con pebre. V. act. y su prot. hacerla. P. 2. lo que. Ma, N. Mapanisig, no solo es el que hace muchas, sino goloso de ellas.

Paul Kekai Manansala Father Alvaro de Benavente's Kapampangan grammar gives the definition "to prepare with vinegar, as salad" for "sisig."

Fernando Fulgosio (1870) mentions some general ingredients in Filipino salads including cangcung, singkamas, celery, alibangbang, cuchai, paco, purslane, fennel and marjoram.

Filipino women knew how to put a look together way before Spain changed our concept of Style and Beauty. Jus look at this image, circa 1910, of an #ITNEG #TribalLeader from #Abra in #NorthernLuzon, #Philippines. Take a closer look of the way she mix and matches prints, texture and am sure color as well. And the way she wears her hair and her accessories is just so haute couture! Those heirloom beads on her neck and arms, her oversized earrings and rings on almost every finger... and the way she draped the fabric around her waist that served as her bag. So functional and chic! #FilipinoWomen were born leaders and they certainly lead in style! #BringBackTheTrueFilipinoStyle #ResearchOnPhilippineStyle #BrownSkinIsBeautiful #Tribe #Heritage #History #FilipinoPride #Photography — with Mike Pangilinan and 11 others.

This looks like a typical atheist stunt. In addition, the angel on top of the Christmas tree got there because she showed up at Santa's door at the time when the reindeer were sick, the elves were on strike, the sleigh was misfiring, and Mrs. Santa wasn't talking to him and he didn't know why. And the angel had to ask, "Hi, St. Fatso! How's your day going?"

That's a Malayan flying fox, one of several types of fruit bats. They've got super adorable faces, and are completely harmless to humans! Nummy fruit, on the other hand, doesn't stand a chance! Via "Milky way scientists" (on FB).

I argued this in a paper long ago but got tired of wrangling with peer reviewers.

Is space-time shaped like a spiral?

South African researchers have claimed that the universe is governed by a 'golden ratio'. This is said to be 1.618 and causes similar geometric shapes that can be seen in objects across the cosmos.

Vilma Manansala You may say, man may possess godlike computer-savvy power and create "brain-like" machine, and give it a life, so, therefore, it begins, therefore, it has endings, as mortal, like us. A parallel axiom of mortal is immortal, as the principle of yin and yang are balances that cause our existence. Pray, how can mortal supersede an immortal?
December 5, 2014 at 2:27pm · Edited · Like

Wendell Weland I do not see how humans would be an ecological asset to machines? But I agree they should be logical. Logical thinking from a machine's perspective would be to eliminate threats to its existence. Other intelligent lifeforms, and oxygen ...oxygen and water makes rust. Eliminate Earth's oxygen and the machines kill 2 birds with one stone.

Wow, tremendous. A volcanolgist could wait all his life to capture that moment. Comments like ..."Did the ground move for you!" or "What rocks your boat?" come to mind. (;>)

> The disappearance of 43 Mexican students - who vanished after clashing with police - has turned into a major political crisis. Thousands of people are massing in Mexico City, to protest at the government's handling of the investigation. Crime and violence figures in Mexico are shocking.
